

Radio-iodine treatment procedure in case of hyperthyroidism

For the treatment of hyperthyroidism, the patient shall be orally administered a gelcap which contains a standard dose of radioiodine which influences the thyroid tissue, inhibiting its functioning.

The procedure shall be conducted in an outpatient setting, the patient shall not be hospitalised.

You can come to the treatment only with a specialist's referral.